The demand for Richmond made cigars s unprecedented. Manufacturers here have found it utterly impossible under ordinary conditions to get the labor needed for making the supply equal the demand. They have written to other cities hoping to get cigarmakers to come to this city, and have had but poor suc to this city, and have had but poor suc-cess. The demand for their product has steadily increased, with no correspond-ing addition to their output. They have now taken to the last resort and appealed to the cigarmakers of the city to sus-pend the eight-hour rule of the men. The matter was brought before the Cigar-makers' Union and the unusual situa-tion explained. The union finally agreed to take the action desired, and now the men are working as many hours of the

to take the action desired, and now the men are working as many hours of the day as they can stand.

There are about sixty cigarmakers in Richmond, and they earn in an eight-hour day from $2.50 to $3.50, depending on the grade of olgars being made and the skill of the workman. The reason that so few of this trade are to be found is that the work is tedious, and it takes four years for a man to complete his apprenticeship. A fully enuipped eigarmaker can roll any number of cigars and they will vary but the smallest fraction of an ounce in weight, and all will resemble each other with the faithfulness of blackeyed peas.

In the execution of his work he is grace itself. He steps about the stage as lightly as a Franch dancing master. In all that he does he is entortaining, and he is worthy to waar the mante of his uncle, "Herrmann the Oreat."

One of the features of his performance is the nerial mystery, entitled "The Princess Mahomeda." Marie Herrmann, who is the "Princess" for the occasion, is suspended in midair, without apparently any menas of support. Others have done the trick, but it is always mystifying. Another trick, old, but always puzziling, is that of the trunk.

The entire performance was pleasing.

The entire performance was pleasing, for it is said of the American public that it likes nothing better than to be "feoled," and that is what Herrmann does every minute he is on the stage. "The more you look the less you see"—that is Herrmann.

There is no abatement in the fight reparding the office of superintendent of schools of Pulaski county, to which Hon. D. S. It will be recalled that Mr. Pollock's nomination was rejected by the Senate on motion of Sena-tor P. F. St. Clair of Giles, who had recommended Mr. L. E. Darst to the Board.
